Generation cannot mean Race

By Dan Maines

Generation cannot mean Race

The New Testament starts off with the genealogy of Christ. Matthew 1:17 tells us a generation is 42 years. And generation is describes as a "time period" rather than Nationality. So generation cannot mean "Race". Verse 17 tells us a generation is from one ending point to a start of another.

So, from verse 17 the captivity in Babylon until Christ, are fourteen generations. The reign of King Zedekiah ended in 586 B.C. So, from 586 B.C. until the birth of Christ is 589 years (589/14=42) From this verse we can see that a generation is about 42 years, However most scholars see a generation as a 40 year time period. As we can see, "generation" is about time.

The verse does not say "all the races from Abraham to David are fourteen races". "Generation" (genea Strong's G1074) does not mean "race" (genos Strong's G1085).

The KJV translates Strong's G1074 in the following manner: generation (37x), time (2x), age (2x), nation (1x).

The KJV translates Strong's G1085 in the following manner: kind (5x), kindred (3x), offspring (3x), nation (2x), stock (2x), born (2x), diversity (1x), miscellaneous (3x).

KJV Strong's G1074 matches the Greek γενεά (genea).
"generation*" AND "G1074" occurs in 32 verses in the KJV.

Not one of these verses is speaking of the entire Jewish race over thousands of years! It always refers to contemporaries and those living at the same time in the first century. If you still think that "generation" means "race" then you acknowledge the fact that man has done this for you. And that's why you give "generation" another meaning in Matthew 16:27-28 and Matthew 24:34

In Matthew 24:34 and other places talking about "generation", If Jesus didn't mean His current generation then why didn't He say that generation of a future generation. "This generation" means the generation He lived in. Some futurist's make up there own idea of what "this generation" means.

That generation was the final generation of the Mosaic Covenant. The context of Matthew 23&24 is about the generation that was living in it.

When Christ said "when you see", He said it to his disciples in His generation not to you and I 2,000 years later. It's nonsense!

to even think that "this generation" is speaking about mankind in general. Generation, does not mean race!
